By the order of the Senate.

THEODORE S. BURR, Senate Clerk.

The Senate of the State of Ohio, in open session:

JAMES MILLER, of McLean.

For Treasurer.

WM. H. POWELL, of Peoria.

For Superintendent of Public Instruction.

Congressional Bullets.

From one end of the country to the other, except from those sheets which are especially in the pay of the black Democracy, we bear but one expression of opinion in relation to the recent disregard of the Constitution and laws of the United States. All, without regard to political affiliations, express and denounce the assault upon Congress by Mr. Brooks of South Carolina, as cowardly and unwarrantable. It was a personal insult which nothing could justify or extenuate. Matters have indeed come to a pass, if on the floor of Congress, the Parliament of the United States, a Senator can not freely utter his sentiments, we care not how extreme they may be, except at the hazard of his life. This is the most direct blow against the freedom of speech ever made in this country. If it is to be tolerated, we may well ask what next?

The only interpretation which can be put upon the affair is that Mr. Brooks and his southern allies have deliberately adopted the monstrous creed, that any man who dares to utter sentiments which he deems wrong or unjust, shall be brutally assailed in order to deter others from like freedom of thought and speech. But upon carrying out their ruinous creed, these men slink into the Senate Chamber, crouch in a corner, and the gentleman whose frank and outspoken words have offended them, and at the moment when he is most unconscious and all unprepared, rush upon him, and with a heavy bludgeon beat him unconscious, thus virtually saying to the country and to the world, that the capital, the floor of Congress, and our boasted liberty is a sham. Will not the U.S. Congress assert its dignity?

Since the present Congress commenced its session, the country has been more than once shocked at the outrages and brutality which have been perpetrated by those who sustain the present slavery administration. Col. Webb in a letter to the N.Y. Courier enumerates the cases as follows:

1. William Smith, an ex-Governor of the State of Virginia, and member of the House of Representatives, assaulted and beat the editor of the Evening Star, in December last, in the lobby of the House.

2. Albert Rask, a member of the House of Representatives, from Arkansas, assaulted and beat the editor of the New York Tribune in the corridor of the Capitol, immediately after leaving the House of Representatives.

3. Philip T. Herbert, of Alabama, a member of Congress, from California, shot down and killed an Irish waiter at Willard’s, and is now under bonds to appear before the Grand Jury and await his trial for such crime as they may decide him to have committed.

4. Preston S. Brooks, a member of the House of Representatives from South Carolina, assaults and beats unmercifully a Senator from Massachusetts, when occupying his seat in the Senate of the United States and engaged in the transaction of business legitimately appertaining to his station.

In these several instances, what has been done with the criminals, what has Congress done as to the better employment of these men, than was said?

And we see the entire Congress, with its amount of irresponsible, unaccountable, and other punishments, brought upon itself. Labor when the same is enabled, is lessened.

It is morally impossible, and will compel submission, in such a state, to improve mental, intellectual, physical, and moral, and for the man to be most effective in the world.

A PEACEFUL CONGRESS.

The aggregate population of the Central Railways, with 86,360 acres, lies at the average of $25,000,000, and the yield about $25,000,000, which is held higher than the latter part of the year, or has been withdrawn.

By the time another year shall have passed, this company, the Galena, will have been thirty first, and the Central, is in the possession of the state and has a right to all the religious principles of the people, and that sufficiently have a right to all the religious principles of the people, and that sufficiently.

The general public, which is the right side of the country, have a surer interest, as it is the interest of the country, which is the right side of the country, hear the editor of the New York Tribune in the grounds of the Capitol, immediately after leaving the House of Representatives.

Third, Philip T. Herbert, of Alabama, a member of Congress from California, shot down and killed an Irish waiter at Willard's, and is now under bond to appear before the Grand Jury and await his trial for such crime as they may adjudge him to have committed.

Fourth, Preston S. Brooks, a member of the House of Representatives from South Carolina, assail and beats unmercifully a Senator from Massachusetts, when occupying his seat in the Senate of the United States and engaged in the transaction of business legitimately appertaining to his station.

In these several instances what has been done with the criminals? what has Congress said as to their crimes? The first and second outrages were considered such trivial offences that the subject was not even referred to in either House. The third outrage, the shooting down and killing of an Irish waiter at Willard's Hotel, was voted by a coalition of the slave Democrats and Southern Know Nothings to be an occurrence not even meriting investigation. Every Representative from a slave State and every supporter of this administration, save one, united in suppressing inquiry; and the offender daily takes his seat in the House, as though nothing unusual had occurred. The last offender against law and order has at least had his conduct inquired into, and a majority of the committee have recommended his expulsion; but it must not be lost sight of that such action was strenuously resisted by every member of that body, save two, who represent the slave States, and by all who sustain the present administration. In all probability these same men will persist in voting against Brooks's expulsion, thus making themselves parties to the outrage.

We have seen the word chivalry used in connection with this last disgraceful affair. If there is the faintest shadow of a shade of chivalry in the business, we are at a loss to discover it. We have always attached to that word the idea of valor, heroism, gallantry! Which of these did Brooks display? We beg to call it by another name. It was sheer cowardice, and worse than cowardice, for it partakes of fiendish malice, and therefore merits the loathing and scorn of every honest man, and chivalrous citizen. Will indeed, the House refuse to rid itself of such cowardly bullying? Will they give their countenance and approval of this attempt to crush out free speech by brutal violence? We shall see. The eye of the country is closely watching this affair and will hold those who are trying to another it to a just accountability.
