Brown, the leader of the Harper's Ferry riot, lectured on Kansas, at Hartford, Conn., in May, 1857. The Abolitionists got up a subscription to help him, and the Black Republican paper vouched for him thus:

Brown is just the man we need in Kansas; and if every man who loves freedom and can spare a dollar or two, would put it into John Brown's purse, we will warrant they get their money's worth out of John Brown hereafter.

Brown got money somewhere, and with the money he got arms and ammunition for a sedition outbreak, and for that he is likely to be hanged. Is that his "money's worth?"

John E. Cook, the chief aid of Brown in his enterprise, was also a lecturer at Hartford on Kansas affairs the year previous. He was a Connecticut lawyer, who emigrated to Kansas. He went back to Connecticut to raise a company of men to fight in Kansas. He appears, by his own account, to have been a spy as well as ruffian. He said in his lectures that when he arrived in Kansas he passed himself off as "a Northern man, with Southern politics;" got into the confidence of the Southern men, received a commission from them, attended their secret meetings; then went to Govs Robinson and Reeder, and told them what he had learned. The Connecticut meeting voted "thanks" to Mr. Cook.

He has done further honor to the training for which they applauded him, and he turns up in Virginia in the improved character of a murderer and traitor, ingrafted upon that of a malecontent, ruffian and spy. These are the Verets of Abolitionism, and if this man could be caught, and made to suffer the penalties of his crimes, we suppose he would be elevated to the rank of a "martyr" in the calendar of Abolitionism, where Marat, Courton and Robespierre ought to stand.

THE NEW OPERA HOUSE.—We would call attention to the announcement of the Comptroller, Mr. Ruffler, in another column, that the office of the new Opera House will open to-morrow, (November 23,) from 9 A. M. to 3 P. M., and every day afterwards, at the same hours. The office is situated on Toulouse street, on the second floor.

Mr. Ruffler informs us that the day of opening the season, we have already announced, the 17th inst., will find this beautiful lyric tenor in complete readiness for the reception of the music-loving public.

JEFFERSON COLLEGE.—Today the classes at this institution, located in the parish of St. James, about sixty miles above here, re-open under a new and wealthy board of trustees, under the presidency of Mr. O. Deque, a gentleman of ability and reliability, well known here, and worthy of all confidence. He has organized an excellent faculty, and the college commences with the brightest prospects.

WOOD, EDDY & CO.'S LOTTERIES.—In another part of our paper will be found an advertisement of the Georgia lotteries, conducted under a State Commissioner, at Augusta, Ga. The agent here is C. T. Howard, who can be addressed as noted in the advertisement.

DENTISTRY.—We call attention to the card of Dr. Charles E. Kells, dentist, No. 152 Canal street, between Carondelet and Baronne streets. Dr. Kells has long been established here, and his ability in his profession is well known.
