THE DECISION IN THE SUPREME COURT. -The decision just made in the Dred Scott case, an ob-scure African, by the Supreme Court of the United States, is probably the most important that ever emanated from that highest tribunal of our country. It declares the Missouri Compromise Act of 1820 unconstitutional—that act which drew a slave line and a free line on the Territory of the United States, prohibiting slavery colonization north of 36 30. This line Congress in 1850 refused to ex-

36 30. This line Congress in 1850 refused to extend to the Pacific occan, and in 1852 repealed the act. We cannot, of course, on the meagre data furnished by the brief summary of the decision which has so far reached us, undertake to divine its full force and bearings. The points of the decision cannot be entirely and accurately comprehended until the full reports of the opinions of the Induce are negated. These was ions of the Judges are procured. These we shall await with considerable interest, and while desiring to avoid any hasty or unadvised remark, we cannot, in the meantime, refrain from expressing our gratification that this important gubject has at last had a final adjudication, and one which is in accordance with the great prin-ciple of popular sovereignty in regard to sla-very in the Territories, and which the newer lights which time and circumstance have im-parted since Congress first injudiciously under-took to interfere in the subject, havebeen effectu. al in establishing by the abnegation in the Kansas Nebraska bill of all legislative control by that body over slavery in the territories. At present we can only give such other facts in the case as are

It appears that the owners of the slave Dred Scott, who brings the action, carried him to Rock Island, in Illinois, and [Fort Snelling, north of Island, in Hilmons, and professioning, norm on the Missouri line, and resided there for years. He carried him back to Missouri, and then claimed togat the status of slavery resumed. The court sustains the action. Judges Taney, of Md.; Camp-bell, of Ala.; Catron, of Tenn.; Wayne, of Ga...

bell, of Ala.; Catron, of Tenn.; Wayne, of Ga., and Daniei, of Va., concur on the constitutional point against the Missouri compromise. Judges Nelson, of N. Y., and Grier, of Pa., adopt the Missouri decisions and thereby join the majority; that is, they stand upon the ground of the lex loci of Missouri, where recent decisions reverse old at hand.

of all should, where result are islands reverse out decisions by re-converting Drod, free in Illinois, to his old state of slavery when returned to Missouri. Judges McLean of Ohio, and Curtis, of Mass., sustain the jurisdiction of the court, with the constitutionality of the Missouri compromise.

It is said, but we do not know upon what specific authority, that the opinion of the court does not reach directly, if at all, that a master may take a slave to a free State, even in transitu, and hold in slavery there his slave—only that a slave is not thus made free when re-taken to the State whence he departed The decision, we are glad to say, seems to be welcomed in most quarters. There are indiscreet and suicidal rayings among some of those who Anor no lare except that of their own violent self-will and passions. For instance, the New York Tribune says that "it is entitled to just so much more weight as would be the judgment of a ma-Jority of those congregated in any Washington bar-room." but on the other hand the New York

Times, which is a "republican" journal also, says:

"No popular revolution will follow this decision, startling as it will be to the opinions and principles of three-fourths of the people of the United States. It will be accepted as the authoritative exposition of the Constitution, and regarded by all departments of the government and by the people as the law of the land. No issue will probably ever be made upon it before the people, for the practical settlement of the question will anticipate any political result that might be reached. But it will profoundly affect the public mind in regard to the general question of slavery, and will change the issues which must inevitably come up sooner or later in reference to it. That will change the issues which must inevitably come up sooner or later in reference to it. That it will render them less absorbing in their nature, less disturbing in their progress, or more safe and peaceful in their results, no one who knows anything of the temper of the American people can for a moment believe."

The New York Journal of Commerce, an independent and indictious fournal, gives promidependent and judicious journal, gives prominency and approbation to the opinion. MAGNETIC TVI VORTER DE