Filmmaker Felicia Furman speaks on campus

Felicia Furman visited the Furman campus Nov. 1 to discuss her film "Shared History: Families Linked Through Slavery." Furman, who is a descendant of Richard Furman, has researched her family's history of slaveholding on both sides, and after a screening of her film, she discussed her efforts to reconcile that past, drawing connections between her experiences and Furman's current effort to investigate its history and intersections with slavery. The lecture was part of a yearlong series, Seeking Abraham: A Project on Slavery & Justice, organized by Furman's Task Force on Slavery and Justice. The task force, which was established in the spring of 2017, will examine the university's historical connections to slavery and create educational programming that can help Furman better understand this part of its past.

made in recognition of their outstanding contribution to the management consulting profession. Norman is the first recipient of the Academic Fellow of CMC-Global in the United States. Norman founded his own consulting firm, Traction Matters/David Norman & Associates, in 1995 to offer results-oriented management consulting and executive coaching services to small and mid-sized companies and nonprofit organizations.
